Dr. J. D. Babbitt

The Royal Society Conference of Commonwealth Scientists, of which I spoke to you on the phone, is taking place at the beginning of April. I enclose a copy of the draft program.

Sir John Cockcroft, who will be an important speaker at this conference, has asked for the following information if available:

1. The number of indigenous scientists and engineers in Canada;
2. The number of expatriate scientists;
3. The total number of university students;
4. The number of university students working in science, agriculture, engineering and medicine;
5. The total scientific staff of the universities;
6. The total science budget of the country;
7. The sums available for scientific research and equipment in the universities.

Anything that you can do to help in answering some of these questions would be greatly appreciated.

G. Herzberg.
