Dear Professor Goldberg:

Thank you for your phone call yesterday. I have written a letter of the type that you mentioned but am not sure whether it has turned out to be very effective. Anyway here it is. I shall be glad to have another try when I come back from my lecture tour.

In the title of the proposal that you sent earlier the term 'Canadian Institute for Advanced Studies' is used. I would strongly suggest that the word Canadian be dropped. Neither of the other Institutes have a corresponding adjective added to their name.

With best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

P.S.

On the attached sheet my secretary has listed the times during which I will be absent from Ottawa in the next six months.
